Our Kind of People

It seems everyone has something today. Walmart has the lowest prices, always. New Orleans has the Saints. The Huskers have Bo. Bella has Edward.

So what do we have? In a word, we've got people. Our people include eight hundred and fifty classmates, fifty-seven teachers, fifteen para-educators, eight food service workers, seven custodians, three secretaries, three counselors, family, and friends.

Sometimes it was what we did as group that made a difference.

Remember the Homecoming Super Rally when everyone joined the faculty dancers on the gym floor jamming out to "I Gotta Feeling"?

Or how about Black Out Night at the Scottsbluff/Gering boys basketball game when a splash of pink reminded a sellout crowd about breast cancer awareness?

Other times, it was individuals who made the difference.

Senior Blake Ross will not forget his pizza and soda with Microsoft founder Bill Gates in Seattle.

Junior Margaret Baker remembers vividly the relief and joy she felt as her older brother pulled up into the driveway returning home from his second deployment in Afghanistan.

Our school days were filled with Algebra tests, sports practice, and curtain calls.

But long after the Algebra tests were completed, the last set of suicide lines were ran at basketball practice, and the final bows were taken after "High School Musical," there were those people.

It was those classmates, friends, teammates, teachers, and family who carried us through our worst moments and celebrated with us during our finest hours.

There are things in life we do not have, but if there's one thing we're sure of at Scottsbluff High School...it's that we've got people.

We've got Spirit

The essence of Scottsbluff High School was reflected in our students.

From the splashes of pink that filled the stands at Cougar Palace in support of breast cancer awareness, to White Out Night at the Alliance volleyball game, our people showed their true colors.

We made statements about who we were with what we wore. During Homecoming week we were back in black, clowning around in neon, and Bearcat-proud on Spirit Day.

We were not, however, defined by what we wore on the outside.

Our emotions ran deep about our relationships with our friends, our teammates, and our school.

Through a fusion of experiences, our true character showed because our people had spirit.

We've got Game

If you're a betting person, you might want to talk to sophomore Rich Williams. He knows a thing or two about beating the odds.

With two seconds left on the clock in the JV game against Cheyenne Central, Williams launched a twenty-two foot jump shot from just left of the top of the key. The shot banked in and gave the Cats a 59-57 win.

One week prior, Williams broke the hearts of the Alliance JV team when he swished a fifteen-foot baseline jump shot as time expired to win 57-55.

Williams completed the trifecta with a game-winning shot against the Torrington sophomores in a 69-68 victory.

"I guess I was just in the right places at the right time. Plus, I have a lot of confidence in my shot," Williams said.

What are the odds....pretty good when you're a gamer.

"When I finished the 200 free at conference swimming, everyone was dead silent waiting for the results. When it finally came up, my team and parents erupted with cheers. I had won by four one hundredths of a second."

-Jarod Kerr, 11

"I will never forget the Kimball basketball game where I got my first varsity start and ended up hitting the game-winning shot at the buzzer."

-Maddie Holscher, 10

"The snowy football game against Sidney was my favorite moment in sports this year."

-Zac Rada, 12

"Our tennis coaches were very supportive of us on and off the court."
