Zeleny to deliver keynote address

Jeff Zeleny, a political correspondent in the Washington Bureau of The New York Times, will present the keynote speech at the fall convention of the Nebraska High School Press Association on Monday, Oct. 15.

Zeleny joined the Times in September 2006, covering politics and Congress. He is a member of the newspaper's 2008 presidential campaign team.

Jeff Zeleny

Zeleny came to the New York Times from the Chicago Tribune, where he worked as the national political correspondent for more than five years from the newspaper's Washington bureau. He was the lead writer of the 2004 presidential race.

He chronicled the first year of Senator Barack Obama's time in Washington, traveling with the Illinois Democrat across the country and the world, producing the first draft of the young senator's rise through a narrative five-part series in 2005. The following year, he covered Mr. Obama's trip across Africa.

He joined the Chicago Tribune in 2000 as a reporter on the Metropolitan desk, where he was a member of the reporting team that won a Pulitzer Prize in explanatory journalism for documenting gridlock in the nation's air traffic system. Zeleny also covered the White House, Congress and reported from 40 states and more

He graduated from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1996, where he studied news-editorial journalism and political science, and completed internships at The Florida Times-Union, the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette and The Wall Street Journal. He also worked at The Associated Press and the Lincoln Journal Star.

Zeleny, a native of Exeter, Neb., lives in Washington.

NHSPA Board seeks candidates for 2 positions

Elections for the Class A1 and at-large representatives to 3-year terms to the NHSPA Executive Board will be held at the fall convention on Oct. 15.

The current Class A1 representative is Joanne Chapuran of Millard West High School. "Chappy" was appointed by the Board to complete the A1 term following the resignation of Matt Deabler, the former adviser at Omaha Central.

Scott Foster of Waverly High School is the current atlarge member.

Nominations will be accepted from the floor at the Oct. 15 advisers meeting.

Responsibilities of board members include traveling to approximately five meetings per year) for which members are reimbursed for mileage), voting on issues affecting the business of the board, and helping organize conventions and contests.

Board members elect an acting president, secretary and chairs for the Convention Committee, Contest Committee, Critiques/Cornhusker Committee and the Commendation Committee.

Sherry Tonniges of Centennial returns to the Board after her appointment to complete the term for the Class C representative. Former representative LuAnn Womack was unable to complete her term after leaving the classroom at Lutheran Northeast High School in Norfolk.

The excited chatter of my publication kids made the journey home from summer workshop seem much quicker than the typical seven hours. As I listened to their ideas and plans for the new year, I couldn't help but recall my first year as an adviser. Oh how well I remembered that day only seven years ago when the principal at my new school offered me the teaching position, as he added almost as an afterthought, "Oh, and you will be taking over the school newspaper."

School newspaper? No problem. I had been on staff of my own school newspaper some...well way too many years ago, so how bad could it be? I quickly pulled out every book I could find and prepared myself for the challenge only to learn that I would be advising year-book as well.

As true trepidation set in and I neared a breakdown, I met an adviser from across the river, who offered guidance and advice. He became a friend who understood my frustrations and tears, as well as my celebrations. He became, and remains, a valued mentor. I'd like to share a few of things that he taught me:

1. Be a joiner – Join your state and national journalism organizations. It is through organizations such as NHSPA and JEA that you have access to conventions, workshops, professional speakers, materials and a pool of seasoned advisers. Join a listsery and draw on the expertise of others. Be a mentor or seek a mentor. Members of the NHSPA Board can help you find veteran advisers to offer advice or give you a shoulder to cry on.

2. Be competitive – Enter your publications and students' work into the state and national competitions. A competitive staff takes ownership in their publications and they will become more accountable and better journalists. Students like to win, and they can't win if they don't play. Challenge them to do their best work and then submit it.

From the NHSPA President

3. Get involved - Attend state and national conventions and send students to summer workshop. Keep up with trends, attend workshops and take your students along. Teach students about the working press and the ethics the profession demands. Expose students to professionals who are in the trenches.

4. Make Deadlines – as simplistic as it sounds, there will always be those misguided staff members who will call your bluff and not finish their work on time. Don't let it happen. Develop a strong policy for meeting deadlines, publicize the perils of missing deadlines, and then stick to it. Demand the best from your students and expect nothing less.

5. Love your kids – Is there any other place where a teacher can develop the relationships and bonds with kids like those originating in the publication room? For years advisers have given students a safe haven, a home away from home, a place to feel free to be themselves. If you have not added counselor, confidant or mentor to your resume, you've missed out on some good times in education.

6. Take time for yourself - As a rule journalism teachers are pretty driven, but take time for yourself. Call a friend and relieve frustrations during a long walk. Take your spouse or kids out to dinner and a movie. Go home and settle in with a good book and a cup of hot chocolate. Whatever you decide, remember to take time for yourself because "after all, tomorrow is another day."

Board encourages advisers to nominate their top students for Student Journalist of the Year

The NHSPA Board is encouraging all advisers to nominate their top students for the annual Student Journalist of the Year competition. Nebraska's winner will automatically be entered in the national contest where students' portfolios will compete for scholarship money.

Scholarship funds for the national winners — $5,000 for the top winner, and $2,000 each for runners-up — are released when a student enrolls in a college journalism program.

To qualify, applicants must be a graduating high school senior who plans to study journalism and/or mass communications in college with the intent of pursuing a career in that field. They must have at least a 3.0 GPA on a 4.0 scale and must have participated in high school journalism for at least two years.

A portfolio which highlights the applicant's journalistic accomplishments must reach Omaha Marian's Marsha Kalkowski, state JEA director, no later than Feb. 15, 2008.

Interested students and/or advisers should check out the Journalism Education Association's website (www.jea.org/awards/journalist.html) for more information on the contest's criteria and requirements.

WHAT'S THIS

From concept to Youtube, students will learn the bare bones of visual storytelling. Both teaching and hands-on production work will be featured in this class which runs from 9 a.m. to noon. Students will learn how to shoot and edit video into a storytelling package.

WHO'S TOBY LEDDY?

The class instructor, Toby Leddy, works as an Associate Producer at mtv.com in New York City, where he handles video production for the online webisodes, First Ladies, and Playlibs.

As an editor, his credits include: Best VMA Host Moments, The G-Hole (Episode 10), and Playlibs Kaiser Chiefs.

Leddy also owns and operates a video production company Digidigi Productions. His company currently edits promo marketing reels for Oakley, Burton, and Crunk Energy Drink.

JEA Nebraska Contest gives publications staffs chance to earn early accolades

As in the past few years, JEA Nebraska is sponsoring a Winter Contest so your current students can get a chance to see how their efforts compare to students across the state. Informational flyers, entry forms and details will be shared at the NHSPA Fall Convention. Information will also be posted off the NHSPA website at http://marian.creighton.edu/~nhspa/jeaneb.

JEA members will be able to submit entries at no cost while non-members will be charged a $1 per entry fee. Proceeds will be donated to the Student Press Law Center. The submission postmark deadline is Nov. 23 and results will be posted after the first of the year.

Contact Marsha Kalkowski, JEA Nebraska Director at mascu@marian.creighton.edu for more information.

Summer camp attracts large number

By Courtney Archer

Journalism students from across the state attended the Nebraska High School Press Association's Summer Journalism Workshop from July 22-26. There were 139 students who attended the fourday workshop.

NHSPA was able to offer additional scholarships this year. Thanks to the many donations, 17 students received scholarships to attend camp and prepare for the year. "We covered a lot of information, but our instructors could hold our attention and made the sessions fun," Catelyn Cantril, Scottsbluff High School, said.

Cantril attended the Yearbook Production workshop, presented by Lori Oglesbee and Margaret Sorrows. Scott Winter taught Newspaper Production and Graphic Design with the assistance of Marsha Kalkowski. Jeff Bowen and Spencer Tirey taught Photography. Duane Roberson taught the Journalistic Writing class. And, for the first time, the NHSPA Summer Workshop had a Broadcasting track taught by Matt Rasgorshek.

The Summer Workshop also offered two Sunday Seminars again this year. Janelle Schultz taught InDesign and Susan Baird taught Editorial Leader-

Each track in the workshop was a hands-on class where students had access to the computers and programs in Andersen Hall on the UNL campus. Students created layouts, t o o kphotos, wrote stories and made videos.

"The instructors were so enthusiastic it was impossible not to have fun," Kaci Ritterbush, Scottsbluff High School, said. "I know a lot more now than I did before camp, and I'm sure the information is going to help me a lot this year.'

Most classes produced a final slideshow video presenting the students' accomplishments during the week. All final products from the individual tracks, along with information about next year's camp, can be found on the NHSPA website at http:// marian.creighton.edu/~nhspa.
